

INTERN ARCHITECT

Do you ask a lot of questions? At school or on the job, have you explored how architecture can be made better? Is your skill set well-rounded with design ability and technical expertise?

How do you react to words such as communication, collaboration and passion? Do your talents intersect with a burning desire to grow as an architect? If so, you may be ready for the next level.

Compelling candidates for an intern architect role with BCDM will also affirm other core traits:

You have served others.

You have demonstrated leadership.

BCDM's mission resonates with you! (Show us how.)

Firm Philosophy & Objectives

We create environments that form people.

BCDM Architects develops physical facilities for organizations which are in the business of forming people, primarily educational and religious formation. Our primary clientele are educators and religious institutions. Formed in 1976, BCDM is now a regional K-12 and higher education design firm, and a national design firm for church bodies, including 19 different Catholic dioceses in the U.S. Our most recent design commissions include the University of Nebraska at Omaha Milo Bail Student Center Renovation, the Construction Education Center at Metropolitan Community College and St. Gabriel Catholic Church in the Diocese of Dallas. Among other projects, BCDM is noted for the design of the Holy Family Shrine near Gretna (NE).

BCDM employees and clients are driven to develop facilities which help others grow in their formation as people. Thus, our people are fortunate to pursue their passions through our work and contribute to the greater good.

We employ two of the three people in our state who are Certified/Recognized Educational Facilities Planners (CEFP/REFP), bringing national design qualifications to our clients. Also, our partners' experience designing, owning and operating facilities coupled with our staff experience in construction management allow BCDM to deliver more value across the design/build/own/operate spectrum.

More than 60% of our employees are shareholders in the firm.
