Continuing Education Seminar

Storm Resistant Concrete Homes and Buildings

Two Dates and Locations: Concrete has long been recognized as the material of choice for resisting high winds, flying debris, and storm surge associated with hurricanes and tornadoes. Now you can learn how concrete building systems can be used to build storm resistant homes and buildings by attending one of our all-day seminars:

February 15
February 28

Omaha, Nebraska
Virginia Beach, Virginia

Agenda: National and local experts will be on hand to present the following topics (8:00 am – 4:00 pm):

- Fortified for Safer Living
- Building Codes, Safe Rooms and Storm Shelters
- Concrete Masonry
- Precast Concrete
- Tilt-up Concrete
- Removable Forming Systems
- Insulating Concrete Forms

Instructors: At least three of the following qualified instructors will be on hand to present:

Erin Ashley, Ph.D., Director of Codes and Sustainability, National Ready Mixed Concrete Association

Denis Graber, P.E., Director of Technical Publications, National Concrete Masonry Association

Peter Hamer, Fortified Program Administrator, Institute for Business and Home Safety

Lionel Lemay, P.E., S.E., LEED AP, Vice President of Technical Resources, National Ready Mixed Concrete Association

Ed Sauter, AIA, Executive Director, Tilt-up Concrete Association and Concrete Foundations Association.

Amy Trygestad, P.E., Regional Engineering Manager, Portland Cement Association

Who Should Attend: Builders, developers, architects, engineers, contractors, building officials, and product suppliers. The general public is also welcome.

Professional Development Hours: Attendees receive 7 Professional Development Hours. This seminar is registered with AIA and provides 7 HSW Learning Units.
